

YI JIAO (ANGELINA) TIAN

---

angelina.tian@unibas.ch | (+41) 61 207 17 84 |
Bernouillistrasse 28, CH-4056 Basel, Switzerland

EXPERIENCE

---

- September 2021-Present      Ph.D. Student & Research Assistant, Institute for Biomedical Ethics, University of Basel – Basel, Switzerland
- Conduct systematic reviews, empirical research, theoretical argumentation on smart home technologies and caregiving for elderly persons, with first-author responsibilities for the “Smart Homes, Older Adults, And Caregivers: Facilitating Social Acceptance and Negotiating Responsibilities” [RESOURCE] Project funded by the Swiss National Science Foundation
- Ph.D. project: Ethics of caregiving at a distance: opportunities and barriers of smart home technologies for elderly parents of immigrant children in small families (Funded by Institute of Medical Ethics, UK)
- December 2020-August 2021      Research Intern, Institute for Biomedical Ethics, University of Basel – Basel, Switzerland
- Assist on systematic reviews, theoretical argumentation projects and papers on various teams across the institute.
- February-June 2019      Executive Search Intern, Automotive and Industrial Markets, Korn Ferry Organizational Consulting – Shanghai, China
- Research, interview, and offer feedback simultaneously on 3-6 C-suite level executive-search cases while constantly adjusting search strategy.

EDUCATION

---

- King’s College London, London, UK
December 2020: Master of Science in Bioethics & Society
- McGill University, Montreal, QC, Canada
December 2018: Master of Science in Bioethics & Society

KEY SKILLS AND CHARACTERISTICS

---

- Quantitative Methods
- Qualitative Methods
- Clinical Ethics
- Public Health Ethics
- Narrative Medicine
- Systematic Reviews
- Transcriptions
- Data Analysis

PUBLICATIONS

---

- Tian, Y.J. (The Ethical Unjustifications of COVID-19 Triage Committees. Bioethical Inquiry 18, 621–628 (2021). <https://doi.org/10.1007/s11673-021-10132-0>